INTRODUCTION

The Film, TV and Interactive Digital Media industries are highly competitive, but not impossible to break into. There is no 'right' way to go about negotiating a pathway into these industries. This guide provides an overview of the types of training opportunities, work experience and networking initiatives available to newcomers, as well as to those currently working in the industry looking to develop their skills. While it is not possible to provide a complete list of all initiatives, this guide gives examples of the types of initiatives on offer and where to find information on them.

It is important to research and gather as much information about the industry as possible and this guide is designed to assist you in finding this information. To further help you in your research, contact details for the organisations and publications referred to in this guide are listed in alphabetical order at the back of this handout. In the provided list of contacts there are many networks, clubs and industry societies, which provide subscription e-newsletters and regular updates on industry news. There are many different ways to get a foot in the door; this guide provides a number of options for you to pursue.

WORK EXPERIENCE, EMPLOYMENT AND FUNDING OPPORTUNITIES

Production companies

Some production companies and producers are willing to offer work experience to students or people interested in getting into the film and TV industry. Generally work experience is unpaid. To approach production companies and producers directly, you will need to access lists of production companies and producers from industry directories. The main industry directories the Encore Directory and The Production Book can be found online at:
www.encoredirectory.com.au and www.filmtvbiz.com.au

Please note that most production companies are small and may not be able to offer work experience.

Production reports

- Screen Australia's Upcoming Production Report (UPR) is published every month online. The UPR is a select list of features, short features, TV drama and documentaries currently in pre- to post-production in Australia. Please note that producers and production companies can be inundated with calls regarding work and may not welcome unsolicited enquires. Their preference may be to employ via crewing agencies. Some producers and production companies request that their contact details are not published and where contact details are omitted in the UPR, they are unavailable for publication. Foreign productions generally employ a line producer to set up the production office in Australia a few months before the principal photography date, and Screen Australia will not be able to provide production office contact details until the production office is set up.
  www.screenaustralia.gov.au/productions/upr.aspx

- Encore Magazine provides a comprehensive snapshot of what's happening in the film, television and digital media industry. As well as the latest news, their site provides recruitment opportunities, a calendar of upcoming events, classified advertising and a comprehensive industry directory (subscribers only).

Screen Australia Indigenous Department

The Indigenous Department develops initiatives and strategies that support the professional development of Indigenous film practitioners and their work. This is done through funding programs that invest in the development and production of outstanding and distinctive Indigenous projects across all genres and mediums.

The Department offers professional development to filmmakers by providing both development and production investment funding for drama, documentary, animation and interactive digital media projects. The Department also offers internships for filmmakers to work with more experienced practitioners and Travel Grants for filmmakers who have been selected for key international film festivals.

The Department also contributes to policy within Screen Australia and the wider Australian industry.

For more information on funding programs, guidelines and current initiatives please go to www.screenaustralia.gov.au/funding/indigenous/default.aspx

Or call the Indigenous Department on toll free 1800 213 099 or indigenous@screenaustralia.gov.au.

NETWORKING AND MARKETING OPPORTUNITIES

Festivals

There are many festivals held around Australian for entrants of all levels. Film festivals are a good opportunity for new filmmakers working on low budgets or inexperienced filmmakers experimenting to have their projects viewed and exhibited. Festivals help gain useful critical feedback as well as public notoriety. Festivals are also a good networking ground; often have events such as question and answer time with the established filmmakers and meet and greet nights where you can meet other industry members.

Below are some examples of festivals which take entries of all levels, although you can find out more through the trade magazines such as Encore, Screen Hub and Inside Film

- Melbourne Underground Film Festival was established in 2000 and held annually to encourage the independent film industry. This festival communicates mainly through press releases, which can be subscribed to at the following web address:
  www.muff.com.au

Check upcoming events on Screen Australia's events web page:
www.screenaustralia.gov.au/news_and_events/Events.aspx

Subscribe to the free industry newsletters published by your local state government agency and local screen development and resource organisation, the subscription-based newsletters Encore, IF Magazine and Screen Hub, or pick up the free newspaper RealTime + OnScreen (available free from selected cinemas, cafes and galleries). All of the above publish information and updates of upcoming awards, competitions, exhibitions, festivals, screenings, seminars and workshops.

Member-based unions, guilds and associations run seminars, conferences and events, and publish newsletters (see Industry guilds and associations, page 6).

Below is a list of some of the conferences, events and networking opportunities on offer.

Marketing

For a current and comprehensive guide to international festivals, markets, distribution and broadcasting, please visit the Marketing section of the Screen Australlia website at

- Doc Week
  Doc Week is an event for anyone working in documentary film and television, offering insights into the factual future with many opportunities for deals, debate and discussion. The program at Doc Week offers a mix of screenings, masterclasses, panels and an extensive marketplace.
  www.docweek.org.au

- The Australian Screen Directors Association (ASDA) Conference
  Aimed at working film and television directors, ASDA provides a focused and entertaining program.
  www.adg.org.au

- Connecting Australian Artists Online (artsConnect)
  An online art portal promoting Australian artists of all media – filmmakers, painters, poets, musicians, actors, animators and comedians. Established in 2002 with assistance from the New Enterprise Incentive Scheme (NEIS), artsConnect provides inexpensive web services to the arts industry and assists artists in marketing and promoting their work on the internet. Artists are invited to register for a one-page web profile that outlines their creative interests, shows examples of their work and provides a contact for others.
  www.artsconnect.com.au

- Networking Action for Filmmakers and Actors (NAFA)
  A networking entity for actors, writers and filmmakers in Sydney. Choc Tops in the Attic is a regular evening of conversation, discussion and networking, where guest speakers share insights with an audience comprising interested professionals, enthusiastic beginners and eager students.
  www.nafa.net.au

- Parnassus' Den
  A Sydney-based forum for the development of new Australian writing for theatre, film, TV and radio. Professional actors read new scripts written by emerging and established Australian writers, then the audience is invited to comment. Parnassus' Den has its own ensemble of 75 actors across all age ranges, and all scripts are rehearsed in advance. There is also a directory of directors, enabling writers to have the experience and expertise of people working in the industry to help them produce the best possible readings.
  www.parnassusden.org.au

- Popcorn Taxi
  Holds regular events in Melbourne and Sydney, where filmmakers and enthusiasts can meet, watch films of all types, and discuss the filmmaking process. The focus is on the filmmakers' craft and careers rather than tabloid-like gossip. The moderators/interviewers (often filmmakers themselves) aim in most sessions to explore why the filmmakers made the choices they did, and how they brought their visions to the screen. The guests are producers, directors, editors, cinematographers, visual effects supervisors, designers, composers and actors.
  www.popcorntaxi.com.au

- Screen Forever Conference
  Australia's leading annual conference for emerging and low-budget film and television producers, and for emerging writers and directors who want to find a producer. Screen Forever is an intensive and interactive three-day conference of informative and practical sessions, that offer a unique opportunity for newcomers to meet and learn from producers, directors, distributors and network commissioning editors. Delegates attend to network, pitch ideas and gain development opportunities.
